

Jarvis Jeremy Gibbons aka JrealityG

Jarvis Jeremy Gibbons, better known as JrealityG is an American rapper, songwriter born & raised in a small city (Jasper, FL) which only has three traffic lights in the city. There's not very much entertaining to do besides playing sports, wildlife gaming & ATV riding. JrealityG took a liking to hip-hop at the very young age of 5 years old mimicking artist like LL cool J, Bones thugs n harmony, The late Great 2 pac Shakur & also another legend The Notorious B.I.G. who he was introduced to through cassette tapes by his older teen cousins. Over the years his mimicking would actually turn into a second nature hobby for the youth, so instead of mimicking other artist JrealityG crafted his own style of rhyming, cadence with an impactful word play in the form of writing & freestyling that is like no other.

As a teen JrealityG enjoyed listening to Field Mob, Kanye West & Andre 3000 of Outkast, yet he could honestly say that Shawn Jay of Field Mob was actually the 1st artist who challenged him as a writer. His delivery, play on words & whittiness made JrealityG aware that there are different levels to being a rapper in comparison to being a songwriter. Throughout JrealityG years of development, he has been blessed to be around several legendary lyrical talents out of the Florida/Georgia market. In addition to being cultivated by the southern roots his grandfather instilled in him, JrealityG has harnessed the ability to engulf his listeners through a thoroughly considerate approach to conscious lyrical content adding his own southern style. Influenced by some of the greats such as Jay Z, J. Cole, Rick Ross, Cyhi, and Shawn Jay, JrealityG will always be authentically grounded. The realism in his voice will take you on an expedition of culture, laughter, and a renewed desire for musical expressions.

His ability to craft a unique musical presence is pleasantly revealed in his new single/video "Rules Of The Game" featuring Bigga Rankin.
